

Shukushukuma Beadwork Catalog

Shukushukuma meaning busy hands is a project of the Topsy Foundations skills Training programme.

Shukushukuma Beadwork Project

About this project:

The Topsy foundation partners with rural communities, bringing about change through a multi-faceted approach to the consequences of HIV and AIDS. The Shukushukuma Beadwork Project, meaning “Busy Hands”, has local women making intricate beadwork using traditional methods to produce contemporary South African products

Christine Fischer, a well-known Johannesburg bead-artist manages the beadwork project, focusing not only on teaching beading techniques to the women, but imparting essential knowledge pertaining to the whole process of running a small business. This includes guiding the women through the production process, understanding the associated costing and marketing, as well as an awareness of aesthetic sensibility in a drive towards entrepreneurial independence for the women.

On average 15 women from areas surrounding the Topsy Comprehensive HIV and AIDS Clinic, including Balfour, Villiers and Grootvlei are active within the project at any one time with over 100 having been trained since its inception in the latter half of 2002.
